COURSE REQUIREMENTS:

Midterm Exam: 50%

Final Exam: 50%

Discussion Sessions: TBA

This course will examine how certain ideas (i.e., beliefs, opinions, tastes and preferences) have come to dominate people's hearts and minds and govern their actions. Are certain ideas more influential than others because they possess certain intrinsic qualities that make them so? Through which mechanisms and institutions are power relations produced and maintained or challenged and transformed in the realm of culture? Do power positions in the sphere of culture reflect power positions at the "deeper" layer of the economy or does culture have an autonomous life of its own? We are going to discuss those critical issues of politics in the light of the different frames of analysis developed by some well-known classical and contemporary theorists of culture. At each session all the students are expected to be ready and responsible to make a critical presentation of the reading materials, which will have a considerable influence on your final grade.

ACADEMIC HONESTY

The Department of Political Science and International Relations has the following rules and regulations regarding academic honesty.

1. Copying work from others or giving and receiving answers/information during exams either in written or oral form constitutes cheating.
2. Submitting take-home exams and papers of others as your own, using sentences or paragraphs from another author without the proper acknowledgement of the original author, insufficient acknowledgement of the consulted works in the bibliography, all constitute plagiarism.
3. Plagiarism and cheating are serious offenses and will result in:
 - a) an automatic "F" in the assignment or the exam
 - b) an oral explanation before the Departmental Ethics Committee
 - c) losing the opportunity to request and receive any references from the entire faculty
 - d) losing the opportunity to apply in exchange programs
 - e) losing the prospects of becoming a student assistant or a graduate assistant in the department

The students may further be sent to the University Ethics committee or be subject to disciplinary action.
